

5 Life Lessons Learned From Full-Time RVing and Roadschooing

Roadschooing is a unique approach to education, where families take advantage of the freedom of full-time RVing to travel and learn on the road. This lifestyle allows children to gain valuable life experiences while exploring different landscapes, cultures, and communities. Through stories, lyrics, and lessons learned, families who have embraced full-time RVing and road schooling have discovered a wealth of knowledge beyond the traditional classroom.

1. Embracing Flexibility and Adaptability

Living in an RV teaches everyone in the family the importance of being flexible and adaptable. From choosing new campgrounds to adjusting to different weather conditions, the RVing lifestyle requires constant problem-solving and adaptability. Children learn that change is a natural part of life and that they have the ability to navigate through it with a positive attitude.

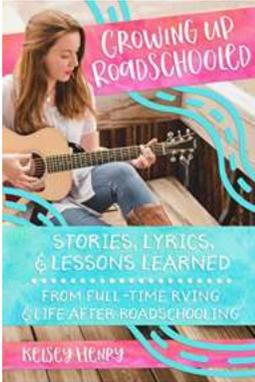

2. Building Strong Relationships

Full-time RVing provides ample opportunities for families to connect with new people and build lasting relationships. Whether it's fellow RVers in the campground or locals in the towns they visit, these interactions broaden the horizons of children, teaching them the value of forming connections with people from diverse backgrounds and cultures.

3. Promoting Self-Reliance

Living on the road encourages self-reliance in both children and parents. From learning how to manage resources efficiently to fixing common RV problems, families become adept at tackling challenges on their own. Children gain the confidence to take initiative and problem-solve independently, shaping them into resilient individuals.

4. Seeking Continuous Learning Opportunities

Roadschooling allows for a non-traditional approach to education, where children learn from real-life experiences rather than textbooks. Families immerse themselves in historical landmarks, museums, national parks, and various cultural activities. This hands-on learning approach fosters a love for discovery and ensures that education is an ongoing pursuit of knowledge.

5. Embracing Adventure and Living in the Present

RVing families are constantly surrounded by new adventures and experiences. Whether it's exploring hidden gems or embarking on spontaneous road trips, the RV lifestyle teaches everyone to embrace the present moment and appreciate the beauty of the world. Children learn that life is about the journey and not just the destination – a lesson that will stay with them throughout their lives.

Stories, lyrics, and lessons learned from full-time RVing and road schooling offer a glimpse into the transformative power of this unique lifestyle. Beyond traditional education, children grow, adapt, and become well-rounded individuals through the hands-on experiences they encounter on the road. The flexibility, adaptability, self-reliance, and love for continuous learning obtained from this lifestyle shape them into individuals ready to face any challenges that come their way.

So, if you're seeking a different approach to education and a life of adventure, consider the full-time RVing and road schooling lifestyle. The lessons learned and memories created along the way will stay with your family for a lifetime!

Hit the open road with Kelsey Henry as she shares her RV life adventures of Growing Up Roadschooled from ages 11-17, and beyond! Hear a kid's perspective of the full-time RV travel lifestyle, getting into college, and starting a career in the “real world”. This story is part travel memoir, schooling manifesto, songbook, personal growth journey, and embarrassing moments! It's full of bold displays of affection, teenage drama, RV mishaps, and a lot of stories about bugs.

Under the pressure of expectations to turn out “normal”, Kelsey becomes highly motivated to prove herself as she navigates into adulthood and struggles with the contrast of conforming to stationary life and honoring her inner roadschooled kid. With humor, positivity, and many lessons learned, she captures her journey through music lyrics and finds her way back to who she wants to be.

This book centers around the themes of:

- Roadschooling and RV family travel
- Music and songwriting
- Self-esteem, confidence, and positivity
- Internal and external expectations
- College and corporate career
- Location independence and solo travel
- Remote work and being a digital nomad
