15-year-old Dillon is on the run.

Until recently he enjoyed friends, family, and the safe confines of a religious cult. But when a confession ignites the wrath of his church, Dillon escapes ... and he's about to discover a vast world beyond the private walls of his former life.

Once in Sydney he faces a bustling city of dreams and nightmares. Desperate to survive, Dillon is lured to the red-light district where strangers pay for pretty boys.

Here he forges new friendships in a scene he struggles to comprehend. Yet with each new friend comes enemies, not least the mysterious killer targeting young men lining The Wall. Forced into decisions beyond his years, Dillon must learn who to trust, who to help, and who to defy.

As his past catches up, Dillon faces deadly pitfalls which threaten his very life. And if he survives at all, he might yet find the one thing that truly matters - the freedom to become anything he wants.

This is a beautifully written story. It's a dark subject matter but ... tastefully done as we follow 15 year old Dillon across Australia ... It's tragic, heartbreaking ... but it's also filled with joy and hope of a better future ... my favourite read of 2022.

"I thought I'd read one chapter before I go to sleep... I couldn't put the book down. This book made me laugh, cry and want to pull the main character out for a hug. It's wonderfully written and I found myself visualising the places and people so easily it should be made into a movie. It's a delightful mix of world truths, compassion and hope with a serial killer for good measure. This has to be one of my most favourite Australian authors. Lets hope he writes again soon!" (Verified Amazon Purchaser Review)
