When nineteen-year-old Amy Parkin finds out she is expecting her lover's child, the last thing she expects is for him to turn her away without the slightest regard for her welfare.

Her own family is no more sympathetic, expecting her to dispose of the child as if it were nothing more than a slur on their good name.

She knows she must act fast if she is to ensure that her unborn baby is safe from harm. Amy sets off for Kirwin, Wyoming to marry a certain Mr. Gleeson, only to find that the man died four days before her arrival.

If it weren't for a fortuitous meeting with hardware store owner Benjamin Wilson and his young son Joshua, she would be all but destitute.

With Christmas fast approaching, can Amy finally manage to find some security for herself and her baby?

Or will the people who are supposed to be her saviors turn out to be something completely different?
