Working on Yachts in the Mediterranean: A South African Guide

Are you thinking of working on yachts and mega yachts but don't know where to start?

I watched the sunset in Villefranche, sat in the stands at the Grand Prix in Monaco and swam in the flat, calm sea in Antibes. Life here was just so good! I wanted to live in an apartment with all my friends, go out every night, and take the train to a new town every day. The sun never seemed to stop shining and I had never seen such calm water in my life. All the people I met were so happy and excited about life and I loved it!

The next thing I knew, I was back in Durbs.....

One year later I had saved up enough money to book my flight back to France, completed my yachting courses, and together with my best friend and boyfriend were ready! What an exciting adventure it would turn out to be.

After being asked many, many, MANY times by friends and their friends on how I got started in the yachting industry, I realized that I wasn't the only person interested in doing it, which is why I deemed it necessary to write a book on the subject specifically for SOUTH AFRICANS.

I hope you find it helpful in every way possible. I have not held back on any information. In 60 or so pages, you will get to read about the good, the great, the bad and the ugly that comes with working in the yachting industry. Under the following headings you will find an honest account of the most common questions I have been asked, as well as what I feel you need to know as a South African to get into the industry.
