Choosing the Right Accommodations

When it comes to solo travel, your choice of accommodation plays a crucial role in your overall safety. Opt for reputable hotels or guesthouses with good reviews and ratings. Look for accommodations that offer secure entrances, well-lit hallways, and 24-hour front desk service.

Consider staying in a room closer to the reception area or on higher floors, as they tend to be safer. If you're booking through online platforms, carefully read the reviews and select places that prioritize safety and are recommended by other solo female travelers. Don't forget to check if the location is easily accessible from public transportation and well-populated areas.

Pack Light but Pack Smart

When traveling alone, it's best to keep your luggage to a minimum. Having fewer bags allows for better mobility and reduces the chances of losing important belongings. Remember, you'll be responsible for carrying everything on your own.

Consider investing in a sturdy and secure backpack or suitcase. Ensure it has reliable locks and is resistant to theft. Keep valuable items like passports, cash, and electronics in a small, concealed bag that can be worn under your clothing.

It's also advisable to bring a portable charger for your devices, a padlock for your bags, and a first aid kit. Remember to pack appropriate clothing for the destination, taking into consideration cultural and religious customs, as well as weather conditions.

Stay Vigilant and Trust Your Instincts

While enjoying your solo adventure, it's important to be aware of your surroundings at all times. Pay attention to the people around you and trust your instincts. If a situation or person feels uncomfortable, remove yourself from it immediately.

Avoid displaying excessive wealth or valuable items that may attract unwanted attention. Keep your money and important documents hidden in separate places. Consider carrying a fake wallet with a small amount of money to use as a decoy in case of theft.

When navigating unfamiliar areas, be confident and purposeful in your movements. Walk with determination and avoid looking lost or distracted. Plan your routes in advance, and try to stick to well-lit and busy streets, especially at night.

Stay Connected and Inform Others of Your Itinerary

Prioritize your safety by staying connected with family and friends back home. Share your travel plans and itinerary with someone you trust, including details of your accommodations, transportation, and any planned activities.

Regularly check in with your loved ones to let them know you're safe and provide updates on your whereabouts. Consider registering with your embassy or consulate to receive travel alerts or emergency notifications.

Use Technology to Your Advantage

Utilize technology to enhance your safety during solo travel. Download travel apps that offer features like emergency services, offline maps, and language translation tools.

Share your location with a trusted contact through smartphone apps or use GPS tracking devices designed for travelers. These tools can be incredibly useful in case of an emergency or if you need assistance.

Connect with Other Travelers and Locals

One of the joys of solo travel is meeting new people from different backgrounds. Engage in conversations with other travelers you meet along the way, as they can provide valuable insights and recommendations.

Additionally, try to connect with locals to gain a deeper understanding of the culture and traditions of the place you're visiting. However, exercise caution when interacting with strangers and trust your instincts when determining whether or not to engage in further contact.

Maintain a Positive Attitude and Embrace the Journey

Lastly, remember to maintain a positive attitude throughout your solo travel experience. Be open to new experiences, but always prioritize your safety and well-being. Traveling alone can be an empowering adventure that allows you to discover your own strengths and capabilities.

By following these safety tips and being informed about your destination, you can travel confidently and enjoy the wonders of exploring the world on your own terms.

Going Solo...

Thanks to the world shrinking due to more advanced transport facilities, more and more women are taking the first step of traveling to other countries and exploring the new cultures, and horizons open to them.

It is the first step outside your own safe and secure circle, which is rather daunting. So for most of us Going solo is not something which people normally do because let me tell you frankly, I have noticed that a number of my women friends, colleagues and acquaintances consider any sort of traveled to be a bore.

Who really wants to undergo the hassle of being a woman all lonesome on her own traveling to a strange country or city? Traveling all alone in your own country or abroad, – you must be joking, DJ.

This attitude was rather surprising, because I took travelling alone to be a part and parcel of my own lifestyle, while growing up and I definitely did not have any hassle in picking up my small travelling bag and catching my train, all alone on a long journey, even when I was 15.

But then I was just going from one known destination to another known destination. So I did not bother much about the safety aspects, then, because I knew both destinations well.

So for me, at that time, Going solo was the rule, and not an exception. But things changed later, while working. It was a different matter altogether. I never knew when the call would come from the top for me to get myself to such and such place by such and such time to attend such and such a meeting or meet XYZ.

At that time, I always had a bag packed in a corner because I never knew when I had to drop everything and fly down to all corners of the compass on official duty.

Sometimes I had my team of colleagues and juniors with me. Sometimes I was needed to go alone. And half of them just hated the idea of traveling because they were not used to it. Even when tickets, hotel stay, transport and all other facilities were laid out for them, they just did not want to go and see a brand-new place and experience a brand-new culture. How much they have missed out of life.

This book is for all those adventurous souls who want to go out somewhere and experience new experiences, but there always daunted by the thought that it is not safe for women to travel anywhere in their own country or outside. And definitely not traveling solo in this world full of crime, and xenophobia.

This book is to explode some of those myths. This book is also going to give you lots of useful information about safety tips for women traveling alone, based on my experiences, as well as the experiences of my other peripatetic friends. Also, there are some amusing anecdotes and episodes recounted to me by my well-traveled father, which may not exactly touch on safety, but can touch on some of the experiences that you may face when visiting a new country!

So let the adventure begin.
