Hiking From Cruise Ports

One of the greatest advantages of hiking Alaska from cruise ports is the accessibility it offers. Many cruise lines visit the major ports of Juneau, Skagway, and Ketchikan, which are all gateways to incredible hiking opportunities.

Juneau, the state capital, is nestled between the mountains and the sea, offering numerous hiking trails for adventurers. One popular option is the Mount Roberts Trail, which starts near the cruise port and rewards hikers with panoramic views of Juneau and the surrounding wilderness.

In Skagway, the Chilkoot Trail is a must-visit for history buffs and outdoor enthusiasts alike. This historic trail was once used by gold prospectors during the Klondike Gold Rush. Today, it provides hikers with a chance to follow in their footsteps and experience the awe-inspiring beauty of the Alaskan wilderness.

Ketchikan, known as the "Salmon Capital of the World," has stunning hiking trails that will take you through lush forests and alongside cascading waterfalls. The Rainbird Trail is a popular choice, offering breathtaking views of the Tongass Narrows.
