REVISED and REORGANISED from the original "A Hunter's Trails and a Hunter's Tales" mini series volumes - this revised series also contains new stories that were not published in the original series.

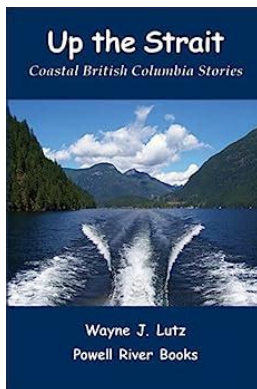

It is foolhardy to think of the hippo as being just a big, lumbering lump of lard. On land they are just as fast and just as nimble as any human athlete. Indeed, they will outrun and outmaneuver most human beings. They have large bodies that absorb bullets like a sponge, and they have relatively small brains that are difficult to hit. After the crocodile, hippos kill more people in Africa than do any other animal. And they have a wonderful and healthy red meat which makes great barbecue steaks and tasty biltong. They are, therefore, a very worthy quarry for hunters. There are some very interesting capture-hunts in the short stories in this compendium; some very unusual stories about hippo behavior at night; and the final story is about the nocturnal capture-hunt and translocation of a problem bull hippo that is too unusual for most people to believe. This selection will give most readers a completely new perspective about the African hippopotamus.
