Brenda Valentine, the First Lady of Hunting, asked me many years ago, “How do I make money in the outdoors? I get invited on free hunts, and I’m on several manufacturers’ pro staffs. Those companies send me product. But I’m not making any money, doing all this.” In talking with Brenda, once I learned that she operated a very-successful lady’s beauty shop, I realized she knew the principles of business. Today, Brenda has become one of the most highly-successful, well-paid women in the outdoors. Although she’s taken her time learning her outdoors craft and establishing herself and her brand, today you’ll learn in the book’s first chapter what she has accomplished, and how she's done the amazing things she has.

Until I met Brenda many years ago, she was the first lady bowhunter I ever had seen in a hunting camp. Actually she was one of the few ladies I'd ever been with in any hunting camp. The hunting club I belonged to always had had a Ladies' Day when the men in the club brought their wives, daughters, granddaughters and girlfriends along with the food they'd prepared to hunt on that day. However, today women are the fastest-growing segment of the outdoor industry. Not only are more women participating in outdoor sports, but outdoorsmen are seeing more women in high-level positions in outdoor companies too.

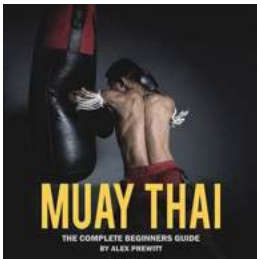

Why has there been such a growth in the last 20 years in the numbers of women in the outdoors? Who are some the women who have helped to blaze the trail to cause this new trend in the outdoor industry? What battles have they fought, what victories have they won, and how have they become some of the leaders in what was once a male-dominated industry?

In this book, the "Outdoor Women's Hall of Fame – Premier Edition," you'll meet 14 of these world changers, as told in their words. They've answered the question most often asked by women who want to seek their fame and fortune in the outdoors, "How do you maintain your femininity and be one of the boys?" By reading this book, you'll quickly notice we haven't included some ladies you probably are convinced should be in the Outdoor Women's Hall of Fame. We're asking your help to add to the next volume of women to be in the "Outdoor Women's Hall of Fame."
