Soul Country is a novel exploring the relationships and responses of three young people to each other, to their differing cultures, to the love they have for their ‘soul country’ and the effects that these environments ultimately have on their lives.

The story is told by nineteen-year-old Jenna Yates. She is a talented and passionate sculpture student, driven by a ferocious storm to an empty house on a spectacular part of the SA coast. Her boy friend has just dumped her and she is having difficulties with her family. Jenna repairs storm damage to the house, can’t bring herself to leave, and then by chance makes a discovery that will change lives forever.

Who is hiding close by in a derelict house, and why?

Four characters face, or have faced life-threatening experiences in their own unique environments...countries at war, the Southern Ocean, Antarctica, and the valley where Jenna is now living. But beneath their idyllically beautiful surfaces all are extremely dangerous and for some, deadly.
