Fontana Holt wanted nothing in her life other than to be a cowboy. To her, "cowGIRL" was an insult to the life and profession that was her life's passion. You either had the toughness, determination, and resiliency to be one or you didn't. She was attracted to them, and competed against them in the real life skills necessary.

She lost four of them by the time she was a young woman. Her brother, her father, her childhood best friend, and one who gave her the news of her true love's demise. Unwilling to love again, "because cowboys die on you," she still lives and prospers in the west, gaining the respect and admiration of all those who knew her. This is her story.
