"Jeffrey Robinson illuminates the everyday drama of hotel folk. In this feudal society heroes, villains and jesters all paddle furiously while the surface remains serene." -- Alan Whicker

The Hotel is a riveting expose of life above and below stairs, an unforgettable adventure into a secret world where the public is never permitted to go. Join the Queen at a £170,000 dinner. Discover which guest once wanted to rent an elephant and which guests are no longer welcome. Meet the men who sneak ladies up to their rooms, and the lady who ditches her boyfriends at the front door. Take a ringside seat at the battle over £30,000 of truffles.

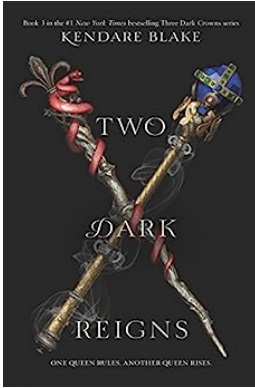

The year is 1995 and The Hotel is London's CLARIDGES.

In 2012, a BBC television crew spent time in The Hotel filming behind the scenes.

For anyone who loved that series, this is the original.

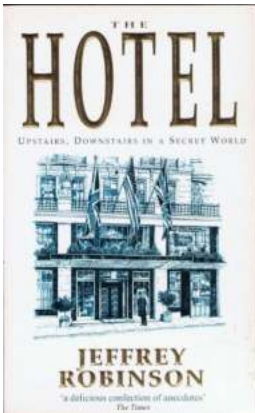

Here is what life was like when Claridges was, arguably, the greatest hotel in the world.

"This is what backstage life is like at hotels of this ilk, I haven't seen it done better." -- Hilary Rubinstein, The Times
