« Personne ne peut savoir quel plaisir on éprouve à naviguer seul en toute liberté sur les océans immenses, à moins d'en avoir l'expérience. »

En 1895, Joshua Slocum part de Boston avec le voilier qu'il a restauré avec ardeur plusieurs années durant. Lui qui a déjà tant navigué veut retrouver le large, seul cette fois.

Trois ans plus tard, c'est la fin d'une « croisière » de quarante-six mille milles. Slocum jette l'ancre dans le port de Newport : il a réalisé le premier tour du monde en solitaire. Un exploit hors du commun à l'époque et encore légendaire aujourd'hui.

Pour des générations de marins du monde entier, Slocum reste un modèle par sa détermination et sa présence d'esprit comme par son art d'affronter la solitude. Son attitude indéfectiblement positive est peut-être le secret de l'engouement toujours aussi vif suscité par ses aventures, dont le récit est devenu un classique incontournable de la littérature maritime.
