Through the years, The Iroquois Hunt has preserved the Bluegrass foxhunting tradition while adapting to modern times. Today, it remains one of the oldest and most prestigious foxhunting clubs in the United States, attracting participants from all around the country.

The Thrill of Foxhunting

Foxhunting is a sport unlike any other. It combines elements of strategy, horsemanship, and the exhilaration of the chase. Riders, accompanied by a pack of trained foxhounds, set out to track down a fox. The hounds use their extraordinary sense of smell to follow the fox's scent, creating a captivating chase that tests the skills of both horse and rider.

The Iroquois Hunt provides an ideal setting for this thrilling sport. The picturesque landscapes of the Bluegrass region offer vast, lush fields, dense forests, and rolling hills, creating an atmosphere that immerses participants in the essence of traditional foxhunting.

Preservation of Tradition

One of the reasons The Iroquois Hunt has been able to maintain its status as a beacon of Bluegrass foxhunting tradition is the commitment to preserving the sporting values and customs that have been passed down through generations.

From the elegant formal attire worn by participants to the traditional hunting horn signal that marks the beginning and end of each hunt, every detail of The Iroquois Hunt is meticulously upheld. The members understand that foxhunting is not just a sport but represents a unique cultural heritage that must be protected and celebrated.

A Sense of Community

The Iroquois Hunt is not only about the pursuit of a fox but also about fostering a close-knit community of like-minded individuals who share a passion for the sport. The camaraderie that develops among members is one of the reasons why foxhunting enthusiasts gravitate towards this traditional hunt.

Regular social events, such as hunt breakfasts and post-hunt gatherings, provide opportunities for participants to connect and share their experiences. It is not uncommon to see generations of families who have been involved in The Iroquois Hunt, reinforcing the sense of belonging and unity that defines this exceptional community.

The Iroquois Hunt Bluegrass Foxhunting Tradition Sports remains a cherished part of Kentucky's heritage. As the hunt continues to embrace the timeless traditions associated with foxhunting, it serves as a testament to the enduring spirit of this captivating sport.

So, whether you are an equestrian enthusiast looking to experience the thrill of the chase or simply someone who admires the preservation of long-standing traditions, The Iroquois Hunt is a must-visit destination for an authentic foxhunting experience.

Founded near Lexington, Kentucky, in 1880--and refounded in 1926--the Iroquois Hunt Club is a small club at the heart of the Bluegrass. Its history, however, is populated by vivid characters with strong links to some of America's most influential figures and most important movements of the last 120 years. Members participated in the Black Hills Gold Rush of the 1870s, the fight for women's right to vote in the early 1900s, Theodore Roosevelt's creation of national parks and the building of the Grand Coulee Dam. At home in the Bluegrass, they also contributed mightily to the development of modern Lexington and were key figures in founding the iconic Keeneland Racecourse and in a number of historic Thoroughbred nurseries, including Calumet and the Whitney farm. Authors Christopher and Glenye Oakford retrace the storied past of an influential group.
