Follow me, a fifty-one year old Australian woman as I negotiate a coup d'état, bombs, floods and explosions whilst living with and volunteer English teaching Burmese refugees at the New Blood Migrant Learning Centre, Naung Bwa, Thailand on the Thai-Burma border.

Attain insights into the complexities the day/boarding students and staff face living and learning in impoverished and precarious conditions. Develop an understanding of the socio-political and educational issues Burmese refugees contend with daily. Gain awareness of the current political situation in Burma through my travels there prior to making a return trip to the school-orphanage in 2015.

Explore the life I led, the only white woman who has done so, sleeping on a piece of plywood in a room lodged between the girls' and boys' dormitory and observe how I navigated cultural differences both personally and professionally.

Feel the generosity, kindness and tolerance afforded to me by the MLC community as an older, highly educated vegetarian woman. Chart my interaction with the adjacent Buddhist Monastery's resident's, the people of Burma other volunteers, aid personnel and people I encountered in Thailand and Burma.

"The meticulous attention to detail makes this more than a voluntourist travelogue. The day-to-day experience of travelling solo and teaching refugees is wrapped in big issues of politics, culture, environment and history of the Thai-Burma border. A thoughtful account that makes you feel like you've been on the journey too".....Graham Hastings, Research Coordinator, National Union of Students (Australia).
