Growing up in Fredricton, New Brunswick in the early to mid 1900's was a sportsman's haven. Allan relates family lore and stories from the Neill farmstead along with life experiences which instilled in him a love for rivers and the wild. "Grandpa is said to have been a fearless man, who trapped even bear carrying nothing more than a hand axe. They found an old log cabin without doors or windows and slept there. Neill awoke (he was only 12 at the time) to hear a bear scratching at the outside of the cabin. He woke Grandpa and said, "Grandpa, there's a bear outside!" Grandpa said "Go to sleep, Boy, we were here first."
