The Four Pillars of IB English Language and Literature

The IB English Language and Literature course revolves around four key pillars:

1. Language in cultural context:

Exploring how language and culture shape each other. This pillar delves into topics such as cultural identity, linguistic imperialism, language preservation, and the influence of technology on language.

2. Language and mass communication:

An in-depth examination of how language constructs meaning in various forms of communication, including newspapers, advertisements, speeches, and digital media. Students develop the skills to critically evaluate and respond to different types of texts.

3. Literature - texts and contexts:

The study of a diverse range of literary texts, including novels, plays, poetry, and non-fictional works. Students explore the historical, social, and cultural contexts in which these texts were created, while analyzing their language and structure.

4. Literature - critical study:

Developing students' ability to engage in critical analysis and interpretation of literary texts. This pillar focuses on literary theories, such as feminism, post-colonialism, and psychoanalysis, to deepen students' understanding of the intricate layers of meaning within texts.

Assessment and Examinations

To obtain the IB Diploma, students taking English Language and Literature are required to complete various assessments and examinations.

The internal assessment component involves the creation of two written tasks. These tasks allow students to explore topics of personal interest and demonstrate their ability to analyze and produce written texts. In addition, students must submit an individual oral commentary, where they critically analyze a literary text and present their findings.

The external assessment component consists of two written examinations. Paper 1 focuses on the analysis of non-literary texts, while Paper 2 requires students to analyze and respond to literary texts. Additionally, students are evaluated through an externally assessed oral presentation on a literary topic of their choice.
