Three Short Stories that Chronicle the Dawn of the end of the Human Race.
Can three ordinary teenagers survive?

For Summer, dealing with her intrusive stepmother makes life an everyday struggle. Only her caring father makes life bearable. Andrew is the star of the high school football team. Inside, however, he wishes for an escape from the spotlight that has been thrust upon him. Cole wants nothing more than to confess his love for his childhood friend, the ever beautiful Giza. Something always seems to be getting in the way, though.

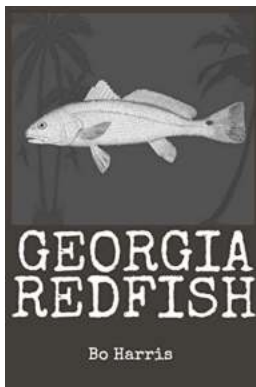

When an attack by an unknown menace from the sky befalls them, these young people must find a way to persevere. Bonds are forged while others are broken. But what happens, when your very family, neighbors, and friends are twisted into something hardly human whose one goal is to eradicate all human life?

In this prequel to The Lost and the Wicked, the reader is thrust into a disturbing world, where nothing is exactly as it seems.
