"... An Adventurers Dream Read..." Michael Reisig

A former New York City investment advisor commissions the help of treasure-lucky Nick Dawson and Brad Radcliffe with an enticing tale from his father's past, and tangible, shiny proof of his claim.

He tells them the tag-along French vessel, Griffon, survived the massive 1715 hurricane off the east coast of Florida and, while returning to Havana for repairs, Griffon's Captain curiously dropped treasure in four locations throughout the Florida Keys, leaving clues from one to the next. He claims his father had knowledge of the location of the first chest.

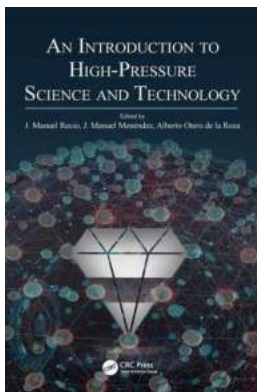

Soon after accepting the commission, Nick and his buddies realize the powerful Florida Mafia will not forgive and forget the carnage that happened just one year ago off the coast of Daytona Beach Shores. The mob also recognizes the young men's knack for finding things lost and valuable—something they have in common. After getting a tip to what the young men are up to, the mob moves in to monitor... for a while.

And then there's the chance return of a couple of blundering crooks who are just lucky enough to cross paths with the treasure team once again. Paco and Dennis will never give up. A pair of old Conchs, who offer their priceless knowledge and colorful character to the story, will make you laugh... and cry.

While searching to locate the hidden chest, the team is forced to dig with one hand and fight off a relentless string of bad guys with the other and the team must decide if the reward is worth the risk or have the gods of good luck flipped them their last chip. It's a gripping sea story of adventure, greed, vengeance, and desperation! The treasure hunters want the Queens Dowry while their new friend is looking for vengeance for the death of his father. The mob just wants them all dead.

One thing is for sure...
